If you test positive for Covid-19 the following steps should be taken:

- Isolate yourself in your house. Isolation means that you should not come in contact with anyone, should not leave your house and should not allow visitors to enter your house. Isolation should last at least 10 days from the date the symptoms appear, or if there are no symptoms from the date the laboratory test is performed.
- Consider isolating yourself from your other household members, where possible. Transmission within the household is very common, but it may be prevented if sick individuals or those with a positive coronavirus test immediately isolate themselves in a different part of the house and have no direct contact with other household members.
- Make a list of everyone that you had a close contact with (10 minutes within 6 feet) starting two days before symptoms appeared; or if not exhibiting symptoms, two days before the date the laboratory test was performed. Contact each individual and tell them that they have been exposed to the virus and they need to remain in quarantine in their home for 14 days from the date they were exposed. Individuals in quarantine should not leave their house, except for emergencies; and should not go to work or school. If individuals in quarantine develop one or more COVID-19 symptoms they should contact a healthcare provider or health department and be tested for COVID-19.
- If you have severe symptoms immediately call your primary care provider and follow their directions. DO NOT GO TO THE DOCTOR'S OFFICE OR THE EMERGENCY ROOM unless you are instructed to do so by a healthcare provider. Always call ahead.

Individuals should take the following precautions to protect themselves and reduce the spread of COVID-19:

- Always wear a mask when in a public place.
- Avoid large gatherings of people.
- Wash your hands often with soap and water for at least 20 seconds. If soap and water are not available, use an alcohol-based hand sanitizer.
- Avoid touching your eyes, nose, and mouth with unwashed hands.
- Clean and disinfect frequently touched objects and surfaces.
- Individuals that develop one or more COVID 19 symptoms should not attend school or go to work. They should contact a healthcare provider or health department to be tested.
